INTERN

- Internship Project: Condition Monitoring of Hydraulic Test Rig using Machine Learning
- Designed and implemented an automated ML system to diagnose the health of a hydraulic test rig using a high-dimensional dataset (43,680 sensor readings per instance) with multi-label outputs.
- Sensor data included pressure, temperature, vibration, cooling power, and volume flow.
- Applied key ML techniques: preprocessing, feature engineering, model training, evaluation, and feature importance analysis.
- Leveraged Databricks, Scikit-learn, Spark, and MLflow for scalable data processing and experiment tracking.
- Achieved high accuracy with Random Forest classifiers: Cooler (1.00), Leakage (0.9705), Stable (0.9524), Accumulator (0.9116), and Valve (0.8277).
